

Dusting Off the Cobwebs

Written by Paul Belmudes

Thursday, 24 February 2011 06:13

It's Only Been Two Months Since...

Wow! Talk about being rusty and ready to go fishing. I keep on planning to get out there... but something always comes up and keeps me grounded at home or work. I just wanted to give the readers of YakHawaii an update of what has been going on.

January started out with me getting the nastiest flu that took three weeks to recover. Then the company I work for changed their performance plan that kept me busy working hard to meet their sales/marketing criteria. February I moved from a larger house to a smaller one after being in the same house for seven years. Man do I have a lot of kayak fishing equipment. This move has taken three weeks. Then last week I started to get prank phone calls late at night. My wife was so disturbed about them... she asked me not to participate in kayak fishing so that I keep a low profile until this blows over. These calls were total harassment and hopefully with the police report filed, they might track down the blocked number caller. I am hoping it's not a hater that is coming from the kayak fishing community on the Internet. But nonetheless, I will be fishing in the near future. Next week, I have appointments on my off work days. So it looks like another few weeks unless I can squeeze in an afternoon run providing my wife lets me. I really need to be out there and get some sanity back. I've been reading about all these incredible catches on the Big Island and my fishing hat goes off to Shawn for his productivity. I am so happy for you...
{mos_fb_discuss:5}